A MYSTERY .- I that rustic path was treading when the sun his rays were shedding beaming, fairly streaming through the trees; and I watched the streamlet glistening, as entranced I there was listening to the melting, merry music on the breeze, when beneath the oreland county, one day last week, in | trees reclining, where no ray of sun was shining. lo! I saw a fellow being on the ground! Tho no other feature shifted, quickly soon his eyes uplifted-upwards lifted as he wildly looked around. "Good friend," said I, approaching, 'do not charge me with encroaching-are you waiting for some messenger of news?" But no other word he uttered, and no other sentence mustered, save-"You'll find Oatman's family expression surely," said I, looking down demurely, "and very much surprises me indeed." But he only looked the prouder as these words he spoke the louder, "Be sure to buy from Oatman all the groce: ies you need!" "Why, bless me, man!" I shouted, as his sanity I doubted, "you excite my wonder more and more." But he only yelled the higher, with enthusiastic fire, "You'll save much by buying at Oatman's cheap cash store!" So I left him there reclining, where no ray of sun was shining, and his words I since have pondered o'er and o'er : thinking 'twas a mystery, and that some hidden history was weaving round myself and Oatman's cheap cash store. So I resolved at once twise, and Altoona is consequently to buy there; nay, I felt compelled to try there. And behold! JOHNSTOWN, Aug. 3, 1869. Dear Freeman-A Bank mania has broken out in our quiet city which seems to baffle the skill of the best financial physicians. John Dibert & Co. will open a bank this week on Main street. Messrs. Lloyd & Huff, of Blair county, were here looking up a location for a bank. A Company's Saving Bank has reached a subscription of seventy-five thousand dollars. D. count soon. So you see the people are going this is true it is economy with a vengeance. Sewing Machines seem to be the rage just now. For the last six months no less than one hundred of these machines have been sold here-some of Wheeler & Wilson, some of Grover & Baker, and so forth.

perhaps it would not be amiss for your correspondent to sketch a brief outline of familiar characters which can be found alike in the crowded city or the secluded hamlet .-The first which demands attention is THE LADY KILLER. I do not mean a sanguinary individual who indulges a vicious propensity for the immortal translation of those very necessary adjuncts to human society, young ladies; but, on the contrary. I desire to give an accurate description of a certain class of exquisites who are victims of a pleasant hallucination in imagining that every lady upon whom they exercise their address will at once unconditionally surrender. A man of ordinary discernment will have no difficulty in selecting him, even from a numerous crowd, for he effects the "latest style," and his general appearance will at once indicate his character. Every community possesses one or more specimens of the genus "lady killer," and at all times and under all circumstances they can boast of their many conquests, or if necessary, enumerate them. They are always prepared to furnish you with an accurate description of the habits, likes and dislikes of all the eligible young ladies in your neighborhood. You remark that Miss So and so appears to be a very amiable young person, and straigthway you are informed that her amiability is merely a mask which can be assumed or removed with the same facility as the pious Sunday appearance of the Mammon worshipper who serves God on the Lord's day and apologises to the devil therefor during the balance of the week. The "lady killer" will tell you confidentially, that he cultivated her acquaintance for a time, but she wasn't his style, and he dropped her. Our hero is polite.-He will gracefully tip his hat to a well dressed lady whom he passes on the street, and proceeding home, will rail on his mother or use ugly expressions towards his sister for not taking a wrinkle out of his immaculate shirt front, or for neglecting to properly iron his cambric handkerchief. - Most roung ladies understand the nature of this invulnerable popinjay, and his services are only called in requisition for the purpose of passing amusement at the immense and ponderous fashionable agony he can display on short notice. If he ever marries it is with some thoughtless female who understands all the modern appliances which are brought to bear by our latter day modistes in perfecting "the last best gift to man," and the sensible verdict is that they are well mated. The next subject I design noticing is THE SCANDAL MONGER.

This is another peculiar institution which flourishes, in a remarkable degree, in country villages. Our feminine friends have long ago secured a monopoly in the scandalmonging or common gossiping business, and that town or village not possessing at least half a dozen specimens of this class is indeed sadly behind the age. She is a high-toned. moral individual. Her very appearance indicates this, and even her nasal organ is prepared, at a moment's notice, to turn up expressively at the follies and indiscretions of the poor unfortunates whose character for the time being are undergoing the inquisitorial examination necessary for a through dissection, and to display the dark shades in the worst possible light. She always exaggerates the faults and ables of her neighbors. She confidentially communicates to Mrs. A. that Mrs. B. is a horrible housewife, and eternally quarrelling with her too patient husband. An hour afterwards Mrs. B. will be regaled with a story impeaching the good name and domestic arrangements of Mrs. A. And thus it goes. As soon as Madame Gossip has a moment of spare time -and it appears as if she is very rarely emp'oved in household duties-the devil will prompt her idle tongue to some mischief. and in scandalizing or vilifying her neighbors she appears to derive as much pleasure as would a gourmand from a rare dish snited to his palate. The assassin who waylays his victim is not a more despicable character than is the scandal-monger, and until the tone of public sentiment is changed, or becomes healthy enough to enable our lady friends to order out the voluble tale-bearer who may pester them with their poisonous stories, we must make up our minds to bear them as a necessary evil. In writing this, Mr. Freeman, I have a character in my mind's eye to whom I can adopt all I have said, and I have only painted her as others Buz Fuz.

ALTOONA CITY, Aug. 3, 1869. DEAR FREEMAN .- One of the saddest cases of mental aberration it has ever been my fortune or misfortune to witness, came under my observation a few days since, and I pray that I may never be called to look upon the like again. A young, beautiful and accomplished lady, who scarcely five months ago was led a hopeful bride from the matrimonial altar, was less than a week since hurriedly taken away to an insane asylum. From a frierd I have briefly learned the sad history of this unfortunate young wife, which may not be uninteresting to your readers. She was born in Indiana county the year 1846. Her parents were in comfortable circumstances, and their daughter, being rather delicate in constitution, was the object of their most tender solicitude. When quite young she was sent to an Academy under the control of those ministering angels, the Sisters of Mercy, and under their tuition soon acquired those graces of mind and heart which adorn and dignifies human nature. After re ceiving a thorough education she returned to the parental roof, and being accomplished in mind, faultless in form and dignified in manner, she soon became, unconsciously to herself. the pride of the town in which she resided. In order to make some return for the money which had been expended in educating her, she took charge of a school, and while so employed, being unconscious of the deceptions and intrigues of the world, she was induced to become the wife of a young man who was in no wise her equal either in education, principle or virtue-a man who bore the semblance but lacked those qualities of mind and heart so essential to the gentleman. She was refined and modest, he course and forward. She was educated and intelligent, he illiterate and ignorant. She was pure and innocent, he contaminated by the world's vices. She was exempla ry and pious, he laid claim to no such virtue :. If they did not live as agreeably together as they should have done the cause can be readily conjectured. After a few months of wedded life had passed away the young wife began to manifest the most fearful symptoms of insan ity, the alleged reason for which it is not now my purpose to dwell upon. Suffice it to say, that for more than a week she was the object Examinations.—The regular fall examble summed up as follows: The large new pathising neighbors and friends, if not of those conversed quite rationally-and her bearing throughout convinced me that if she had been kept in a secluded apartment, where every passer-by would not be afforded the opportunity to look in upon her, and had she received kind nursing and the tender treatment her conresumed its sway. That not having been done the disposition made of her may have been all that could have expected under the circumstances, but I cannot refrain from protesting against the indecent haste with which she was hurried off to the insane asylum as well as the CAPACITY in which she was sent. Her earnest and piteous appeals for help on the morning she was sent away were heartrending in the extreme, and awakened the deepest sympathy for one so young and gifted and yet so unfortunate and helpless.

I may take occasion to refer to this matter again if future events call for it, and I shall then endeavor to present facts incontrovertible bearing upon the causes which led to this sad and lamentable case of mental aberration. In the meantime I hope that a kind Providence will recall to the enjoyment of reason and all her faculties one upon whom the hand of affliction has been laid so heavily and with such lamentable results.

Velocipedes, in the opinion of our city dids. have become an intolerable nuisance, and the vigilant and untiring member from the Third Ward has proposed an ordinance prohibiting the running of bycicles on the sidewalks. Our and-two velocipedes, if my information is correct. Hence you see the great necessity of an ordinance such as the one referred to.

The pic nic of our Catholic friends, already referred to. I am pleased to say will positively be held at City Park on the 16th and 17th of the present month. It bids fair to excel all other enterprises of the kind, as it is in the hands of ladies who know no such word as fail. It will be the last chance this year for outdoor amusement and innocent recreation of this character and should be well patronized for the sake of the cause and the pleasure. Philip Logan, a machinist employed by the Company, had the index finger of one of his hands taken off, a few days ago, by being caught in some part of the machinery. Will. Cassidy, a brakeman, while coupling cars in the railroad yard here, a day or two ago, had one of his hands badly crushed. Yours, &c.,
